

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA
Richmond Division

IN RE: CIRCUIT CITY STORES, INC.,
et al.,
Debtors.

Case No. 08-35653
Chapter 11
Jointly Administered

MEMORANDUM OPINION

The issue now before the Court in this Chapter 11 case is whether the Debtors may use § 502(d) of the Bankruptcy Code to temporarily disallow certain § 503(b)(9)¹ claims filed by a number of their creditors (the "Claimants"). The Debtors seek to have the claims filed by the Claimants temporarily disallowed up to the amount potentially recoverable on account of preferential transfers allegedly avoidable under § 547 (the "Preferential Transfers). Hearing was conducted on November 12, 2009 (the "Hearing") to consider Debtors' request for ruling on the threshold issue of whether § 502(d) can be used to temporarily disallow § 503(b)(9) claims.

Jurisdiction

The Court has subject-matter jurisdiction of this contested matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334 and the general order of reference from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia dated August 15, 1984. This is a core proceeding under 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(A), (B), (C), and (O). Venue is appropriate in this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

Factual and Procedural Background

The Debtors, Circuit City Stores, Inc., et al.,² filed these bankruptcy cases under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code on November 10, 2008 (the "Petition Date"). Circuit City was a specialty retailer of consumer electronics. As of the Petition Date, Circuit City employed approximately 39,600 employees and was operating approximately 712 retail stores and 9 outlet stores throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. After filing its bankruptcy petition, the Debtors filed a motion seeking entry of an order establishing a bar date for filing requests for payment of Administrative expense claims under §§ 105 and 503(b)(9) of the Bankruptcy Code. On November 12, 2008, this Court entered an Order Establishing Bar Date for Filing Requests for Payment of Administrative Expense Claims Under Bankruptcy Code Sections 105 and 503(b)(9) and Approving Form, Manner and Sufficiency of Notice of the Bar Date Pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 9007 (Docket No. 107) (the "Bar Date Order"). Pursuant to the Bar Date Order, the bar date for filing proofs of claim asserting a § 503(b)(9) administrative priority was 5:00 p.m. (PT) on December 19, 2008. On January 16, 2009, the Court authorized the Debtors to conduct going out of business sales at the Debtors' remaining 567 stores. As of March, 8, 2009, the going out of business sales had been completed. On September 29, 2009, the Debtors and the Creditors Committee filed their First Amended Joint Plan of Liquidation (the "Plan"). The disclosure statement was approved by order entered September 24, 2009. The confirmation hearing is currently scheduled for January 28, 2010.

² The Debtors are Circuit City Stores, Inc., Circuit City Stores West Coast, Inc., InterTAN, Inc., Ventoux International, Inc., Circuit City Purchasing Company, LLC, CC Aviation, LLC, CC Distribution Company of Virginia, Inc., Circuit City Properties, LLC, Kinzer Technology, LLC, Abbott Advertising Agency, Inc., Patapsco Designs, Inc., Sky Venture Corp., Prahs, Inc.(n/a), XSStuff, LLC, Mayland MN, LLC, Courchevel, LLC, Orbyx Electronics, LLC, and Circuit City Stores PR, LLC. The Court entered an order on November 10, 2008, granting the Debtors' motion for joint administration of these bankruptcy cases.

On October 13, 2009, the Debtors filed two omnibus objections (the "Objections")³ to certain of the Claimants' claims that asserted a § 503(b)(9) administrative priority (the "Claims") on the grounds that those Claims should be temporarily disallowed under § 502(d) up to the amount potentially recoverable in an avoidance action under § 547 until the return of any Preferential Transfers.⁴ A large number of Claimants filed responses⁵ (the "Responses"), and on November 10, 2009, the Debtors filed two reply briefs.⁶

³ The Objections were filed as omnibus objections pursuant to Rule 3007(d)(8) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure on the grounds that they asserted a priority in an amount that exceeds the maximum amount under § 507 of the Bankruptcy Code.

In their Objections and at the Hearing, the Debtors requested a determination of the threshold legal issue of whether § 502(d) can be applied as a matter of law to temporarily disallow § 503(b)(9) claims in the amount potentially recoverable as a preferential transfer under § 547. Several of Claimants' Responses took issue with proceeding in this manner. They objected to the Hearing, arguing that it was improper to consider the threshold legal issue of whether § 502(d) could be applied to disallow a § 503(b)(9) claim in a contested matter as part of the claims resolution process separate from any underlying adversary proceeding to determine whether a Preferential Transfer was recoverable in the first instance. The Claimants based their objection to the bifurcation of these issues on essentially three grounds: (1) bifurcation deprived them of their constitutional due process rights, (2) the Debtors were requesting an advisory opinion, and (3) the Debtors should be required to file an adversary proceeding in order to raise the legal issue of whether § 502(d) could be applied to disallow a § 503(b)(9) claim.

Due process requires that parties be given notice and an opportunity to be heard before an ultimate judicial determination is made. As the Fourth Circuit Court has recognized, due process is not a "technical conception of inflexible procedures. . . it is rather a delicate process of adjustment and of balancing of interests in which it is recognized that what is unfair in one situation may be fair in another." A.H. Robins Co. v. Piccinin, 788 F.2d 994, 1014 (4th Cir.

1986) (internal citations omitted). In this case, parties were given ample notice that the threshold legal issue regarding whether § 502(d) could be applied to temporarily disallow a § 503(b)(9) claim would be the topic of the first hearing on the two omnibus Objections. Based on the quantity and the quality of the briefs submitted to this Court (including amicus briefs) and the thorough oral arguments made at the Hearing, the parties have certainly exercised their opportunity to be heard. Further, the Debtors are not requesting an ultimate judicial determination concerning the allowance of these Claims. Rather, they are seeking to postpone payment of the Claims by disallowing them temporarily until the underlying issues can be fully adjudicated in separate adversary proceedings.⁷ To this end, Debtors are requesting a ruling on a threshold legal issue common to all of the Claimants. Each of the Claimants will have an opportunity to have an adjudication made in the context of a full blown adversary proceeding regarding any liability they might have for the alleged Preferential Transfers. Therefore, the Claimants' due process rights are not being infringed. Rather, the due process rights of the bankruptcy estates are being preserved.

The Court is not rendering an advisory opinion. Very real disputes exist between the parties concerning the threshold legal issue. The Court is not asked to issue an advisory opinion when “the facts alleged, under all the circumstances, show that there is a substantial controversy, between parties having adverse legal interests, of sufficient immediacy and reality.” Maryland Casualty Co. v. Pacific Coal & Oil Co., 312 U.S. 270, 273 (1941). The Court is merely making a partial ruling in an interlocutory fashion on a very real controversy, and it is reserving the adjudication regarding the underlying liability for any alleged Preferential Transfers for a later determination to be made in the context of an adversary proceeding.

Finally, the Debtors do not need to file an adversary proceeding in order to have this threshold legal issue resolved. The Debtors are asserting a defense within the claim resolution process. They do not seek affirmative relief. Therefore, Bankruptcy Rule 7001 is not implicated and an adversary proceeding is not necessary at this time.

Pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3007 a claim objection need not be made in an adversary proceeding.⁸ When a response is filed to an objection, the claim objection becomes a contested matter governed by Bankruptcy Rule 9014. See In re Fleming, 2008 WL 4736269, at *1 (Bankr. E.D. Va. Oct. 15, 2008) (“The hearing on the claim objection is treated as a contested matter, and Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9014 applies.”). As such, certain rules, under part VII of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure are applicable, including Bankruptcy Rule 7056, which incorporates Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (the “Civil Rules”). See id.; see also Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7056.⁹

Bifurcating the Hearing between a common threshold legal issue that pertains to all the Claims Objections and reserving for later determination the underlying issues unique to each of the adversary proceedings will create efficiencies in resolving the Claims Objections as well as greater opportunity for all interested parties to participate and be heard. When Claimants were questioned during the Hearing as to how they would propose to go forward if the Hearing was not bifurcated, they suggested that the alternative would be to go forward individually on a claim by claim basis in connection with the separate adversary proceedings. This suggested alternative would take significantly more time and would be potentially detrimental to parties given later trial dates. Given the efficiencies created by this method and the greater opportunity of all Claimants to participate and be heard on the common legal issue, it is not surprising that many other bankruptcy courts have proceeded in a similar fashion—first addressing common threshold legal issues before resolving separate underlying liability issues. See, e.g., In re Leeds Bldg. Prods., Inc., 141 B.R. 265, 266 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1992); In re Plastech Engineered Prods., Inc., 394 B.R. 147, 149 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2008); In re Hackney, 351 B.R. 179, 181 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2006); In re Dawson, 346 B.R. 503, 507 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2006); In re Hicks, 300 B.R. 372, 375 (Bankr. D. Idaho 2003). Accordingly, the Court agreed to hear arguments relating to the one legal issue regarding the application of § 502(d) to temporarily disallow the Claims filed by the Claimants pending an adjudication of any underlying liability for the alleged Preferential Transfers in the context of separate adversary proceedings.

⁸ Rule 3007(b) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure states that “[a] party in interest shall not include a demand for relief of a kind specified in Rule 7001 in an objection to the allowance of a claim, but may include the objection in an adversary proceeding.” The Debtors are not seeking relief of the kind specified in Rule 7001. Rather, they are asserting an affirmative defense to the claims.

Analysis

The question before the Court is whether § 502(d) may be used to bar § 503(b)(9) administrative expense claims. Section 503(b)(9) provides for the allowance of an administrative claim for “the value of any goods received by the debtor within 20 days before the date of commencement of a case under [Title 11] in which the goods have been sold to the debtor in the ordinary course of such debtor’s business.” 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(9). Section 502(d) provides that “[n]otwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) of [section 502], the court shall disallow any claim of any entity from which property is recoverable under section 542, 543, 550, or 553, of this title or that is a transferee of a transfer avoidable under section 522(f), 522(h), 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, or 724(a) of this title, unless such entity or transferee has paid the amount, or turned over any such property, for which such entity or transferee is liable under section 522(i), 542, 543, 550, or 553 of this title.” 11 U.S.C. § 502(d). Debtors contend that the Claimants are transferees of Preferential Transfers avoidable under § 547. From a plain reading of § 502(d), it would appear that if a Claimant's request for payment of an administrative expense arising under § 503(b)(9) is a “claim” under the Bankruptcy Code, then § 502(d) may be used to disallow it.

The word “claim” is defined in § 101(5)(A) as a “right to payment, whether or not such right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, secured, or unsecured.” 11 U.S.C. § 101(5)(A). It is generally accepted that “Congress chose expansive language,” in defining the term “claim,” and therefore the definition of “claim” should be broadly construed and applied. Pennsylvania Dep’t of Pub. Welfare v. Davenport, 495 U.S. 552, 558 (1990). Administrative expenses appear to be a subset of “claims.” Throughout the Bankruptcy Code, the term “claim” is used to refer to administrative expenses. For example, under § 1123(a), “a plan shall (1) designate, subject to section 1122 of this title, classes of claims, other than claims of a kind specified in section 507(a)(2).” 11 U.S.C. § 1123(a)(1). Section 507(a)(2) specifically refers to “administrative expenses allowed under section 503(b) of this title. . . .” 11 U.S.C. § 507(a)(2). So, the kind of “claims” specified in § 507(a)(2) to which § 1123(a) refers are administrative expenses.¹⁰ Further, § 503(b) itself uses the terms “claims” and “expenses” interchangeably: “[a]fter notice and hearing, there shall be allowed administrative expenses, other than claims allowed under section 502(f) of this title. . . .” 11 U.S.C. § 503(b). If Congress had intended that these terms be mutually exclusive, there would be no need to carve out “claims” allowed under § 502(f). See, e.g., F. C.C. v. NextWave Personal Communications, Inc., 537 U.S. 293, 302 (2003) (holding that a reading that renders parts of the Bankruptcy Code “superfluous . . . means, of course, that such a reading must be rejected.”).

When a “statute’s language is plain . . . the sole function of the courts is to enforce it according to its terms.” United States v. Ron Pair Enters., Inc., 489 U.S. 235, 241 (1989). From a plain reading of the text of § 502(d), it appears that § 502(d) can be invoked to disallow a claim for an administrative expense under § 503(b). Nonetheless, the Claimants argue in their Responses that §§ 502(d) and 503(b) should be read separate and apart from one another, where § 502(d) may only be used to disallow claims filed under § 501 and not claims filed under § 503(b). The Respondents rely heavily on the logic of In re Ames Dep’t Stores, Inc., 582 F.3d 411, 430 (2d Cir. 2009) (“Both the filing of requests for payment of administrative expenses and the allowance thereof are governed by section 503, which is titled ‘Allowance of administrative expenses.’ The procedure is independent from the procedure for filing and allowance of prepetition claims under sections 501 and 502, and differs in significant respects. . . . Thus, with respect to the allowance of claims, sections 502 and 503 are separate and independent.”).

Courts are split on the issue of whether or not § 502(d) can be read to apply to claims for administrative expense. The majority of courts have held that § 502(d) is generally not applicable to § 503(b) claims. See, e.g., In re Ames, 582 F.3d at 430-32 (holding that § 502(d) does not apply to administrative expenses under § 503(b)); In re TI Acquisition, LLC, 410 B.R. 742 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2009); In re Plastech Engineered Prods., Inc., 394 B.R. 147, 161 (Bank. E.D. Mich. 2008) (holding that § 502(d) may not be used to bar claims under § 503(b)(9)); In re Roberds, Inc., 315 B.R. 443, 476 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2004); In re Lids Corp., 260 B.R. 680, 683-4 (Bankr. D. Del. 2001); In re CM Holdings, Inc., 264 B.R. 141, 158 (Bankr. D. Del. 2000) (holding that § 502(d) was not applicable to a postpetition administrative expense claim). A minority of courts have adopted the contrary position and read the definition of “claim” in § 101(5) as broad enough to cover administrative expenses. See, e.g., In re MicroAge, Inc., 291 B.R. 503, 513-4 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2002); In re Georgia Steel, Inc., 38 B.R. 829, 839-40 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1984).

The majority approach is more consistent with established Fourth Circuit precedent. In Durham v. SMI Industries,¹¹ the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals stated that “Section 502(d) provides, in pertinent part, that ‘the court shall disallow any claim of any entity from which property is recoverable under section . . . 550, unless such entity . . . has paid the amount . . . for which such entity or transferee is liable.’ Since a court can only disallow a claim after one has been filed under 11 U.S.C.A. 501(a), ‘claim’ in section 502(d) includes only one for which a proof has been filed.” Durham v. SMI Industries, 882 F.2d. 881, 882-83 (4th Cir. 1989). Therefore, despite the expansive language used in § 101(5)(A) that defines the term “claim” and despite the apparent plain meaning of § 502(d) that applies that defined term, the law in this Circuit is that § 502(d) can only be used to bar “claims” where the “claims” are filed under § 501(a). This application of the law is entirely in keeping with the recent holding of the Second Circuit in In re Ames.¹²

The Debtors argue that the instant case can be distinguished from In re Ames and Durham v. SMI Industries because this case involves § 503(b)(9) claims, which arise prepetition, rather than general § 503(b) administrative expenses, most of which arise postpetition. Notably, the Debtors argue that even if the courts in Ames and Durham are correct that § 502(d) can only be used to disallow claims filed under 501(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, § 503(b)(9) claims, unlike other § 503(b) administrative expenses, must be filed under § 501(a) of the Bankruptcy Code.

¹² It is also worth noting that the Ames court specifically did not address the application of 502(d) to 503(b)(9) claims. See Ames, 582 F.3d at 424, n. 2 (“Neither party has suggested that section 503(b)(9) has any relevance to this appeal, and we do not specifically address its interaction with section 502(d).”). Further, the Ames court paid special attention to the postpetition nature of administrative expenses in holding 502(d) inapplicable. Id. at 431.

Bankruptcy Rule 3002(a) mandates that “[a]n unsecured creditor . . . must file a proof of claim . . . for the claim . . . to be allowed, except as provided in Rules 1019(3), 3003, 3004, and 3005.” Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3002(a) (emphasis added).¹³ Bankruptcy Rule 3003(c) addresses filing a proof of claim in a Chapter 11 case: “(2) Who must file. Any creditor . . . whose claim . . . is not scheduled or scheduled as disputed, contingent, or unliquidated shall file a proof of claim. . . .” Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3003(c)(2) (emphasis added).¹⁴

The definition of “creditor” is an “entity that has a claim against the debtor that arose at the time of or before the [Petition Date]. . . .” 11 U.S.C. §101(10)(A). The Claimants are entities whose claims arose against the Debtors prepetition because they delivered goods to the Debtors within the 20 days prior to the Petition Date for which they were not paid. Accordingly, the Claimants are “creditors” within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Code. Rules 3002 and 3003 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure mandate that “creditors” must file a proof of claim to receive a distribution. Therefore, Claimants, as prepetition “creditors”, must file their § 503(b)(9) claim under § 501(a). Neither the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure nor the Bankruptcy Code provide § 503(b)(9) Claimants an exception to this rule. In fact, each Claimant in this case did file a proof of claim under § 501(a). If a “creditor” wishes to be granted an administrative priority under § 503(b)(9), then the creditor must, first, file a proof of claim under § 501, second, have the claim allowed under § 502, and then, third, request administrative expense priority under § 503(a).

The Bankruptcy Court of the Eastern District of Michigan is one of the few courts that has specifically addressed the application of § 502(d) to §503(b)(9) claims. See In re Plastech Engineered Products Inc., 394 B.R. 147 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2008). The Plastech court held that § 502(d) could not apply to § 503(b)(9) claims because there was nothing in the Bankruptcy Code that made § 503(b)(9) claims a “special class,” that would distinguish them from other § 503(b) claims. Id. at 163-64. The Plastech court, though, ignored the fact that nothing in the Bankruptcy Code makes §§ 501, 502 and 503 mutually exclusive. A creditor may be required to seek allowance of its claim under both §§ 502 and 503. This is, in fact, what the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure require in cases of § 503(b)(9) claims.

Both Durham and Ames make clear that § 502(d) may only be used to disallow claims filed by creditors under § 501(a). Although Claimants may be entitled to administrative expense status under § 503(b)(9), they are also creditors within the meaning of § 101(10)(A) and, as such, were required to file a proof of claim under § 501(a) in accordance with Rules 3002 and 3003 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. Therefore, consistent with Durham and Ames, § 502(d) may be applied to disallow the Claimants’ Claims until the Claimants have paid into the estate any Preferential Transfers for which they may be held liable.

The goals of equitable distribution and efficiency support the conclusion that § 502(d) may be employed to temporarily disallow the Claimants’ Claims. Section 547(c)(4) provides a creditor with a “new value” defense to a claim that the creditor received an avoidable Preferential Transfer. 11 U.S.C. § 547(c)(4). This defense allows a creditor “to offset preference payments through the extension of new value to the debtor so long as the debtor does not make an otherwise unavoidable transfer on account of the new value.” In re JKJ Chevrolet, Inc., 412 F.3d 545, 552 (4th Cir. 2005). The definition of “new value” includes “money or money’s worth in goods. . . .” 11 U.S.C. § 547(a)(2). It is very likely, therefore, that in many instances, a Claimant will be both seeking an administrative expense payment for goods delivered in the 20 days prior to the Petition Date under § 503(b)(9) and using the delivery of those same goods as a basis for the new value defense. If the Claimant succeeds in both instances, then the Claimant will receive full payment on the § 503(b)(9) claim and the estate will be unable to get back the value of any Preferential Transfer that was made. This would allow the Claimant to receive a more favorable distribution to the detriment of other claimants in the case. Temporarily disallowing the Claims and holding them in abeyance until the preference litigation takes place would allow this Court to adjudicate these issues together and ensure that Claimants do not receive windfalls to the detriment of other creditors.

Conclusion

For the above reasons, the Court concludes that § 502(d) may be used to temporarily disallow § 503(b)(9) claims. As the Fourth Circuit held in Durham, § 502(d) may be used to bar claims filed under § 501. Rules 3002 and 3003 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure mandate that all creditors must file proofs of claim pursuant to § 501(a). By definition, § 503(b)(9) claims arise within the 20 days prior to the Petition Date. This means that Claimants, as holders of § 503(b)(9) claims, are creditors as defined in § 101(10)(A). As creditors, Claimants must file a proof of claim under § 501(a). Therefore, § 502(d) may be used to temporarily disallow the Claims filed under § 501(a) up to the amount of the alleged Preferential Transfers.
